UPSHAW HITS LIQUOR LAWS

Business is So Bad, He Says, That Clerks Can't Use Their Own Products

"Liquor business is a business so bad the clerks cannot use the merchandise they sell," was the statement of William D. Upshaw, former congressman of Georgia and presidential candidate on the Prohibition ticket in 1932, in a lecture Sunday night in Calvary Evangelical church.

"The eighteenth amendment was not a failure," the speaker said. "It was as well enforced as any other law on the statute books. It reduced deaths, insanity and crime caused by liquor."

The speaker urged every mother to join the W. C. T. U. and parents to organize for a drive to bring back the amendment.

"Liquor has no politics, those who do not oppose it do not believe in the Bible," he said.

Assaults Red Flag
The speaker's lecture topic was "The Blue Coat and the Red Flag." The blue coat represents the men who risk their lives in riots to save their fellowmen," Mr. Upshaw stated. "The red flag represents communism, creeping like a serpent into American life. If I were president of the United States I would issue an order that no where on this continent could the red flag of anarchy be displayed."

The wrong types of sentiment are what we must fight against. Sentiment has caused and won our battles, rung our liberty bell and given us our freedoms and our religions.

handy-man, "beefed" consistently about everything, but otherwise moving day was a great success.

It all started Saturday at 6 a. m. Editor Glen Geib came on the job and sent down his last copy to the Intertype operators, Charles Greco and Ralph McQuade. Most of the copy had been "set" on Friday evening. Promptly at 7 a. m. the press began to turn out its last papers in the Schleyer building on W. Main-st.

Then Came Movers
Immediately after the papers were run off, things began to happen. O. B. Ward and a gang of seven helpers from the Merchants Trucking and Storage Company of Columbus came in and started moving the heavy machinery.

These men really knew how to move. Large stone tables, type machines, a huge lead melting pot, job presses and finally the large press which prints the paper, all came their way and they handled each with a precision which drew much favorable comment from the onlookers.

In a short while The Herald rooms on W. Main-st. looked like a couple of Florida hurricanes and a California earthquake had struck at the same time.

Mobilization of His Forces to Be Ordered for Invasion "Within Few Days"

ROME, Sept. 30.—After having been slowed up temporarily by the League of Nations and British moves in the Mediterranean, Premier Benito Mussolini today ordered full speed ahead as he plunged Italy forward toward war with Ethiopia within a few days.

The unexpectedly solid league front formed at Geneva in opposition to an Italian invasion of Ethiopia and the surprising action of Great Britain in rushing warships and fighting planes to the Mediterranean two weeks ago compelled Il Duce to pause and consider his projected war again.

Meant Statement
Now, after considering the situation in all its aspects, Premier Mussolini has made it clear he meant what he said when he declared he would obtain what he wanted in East Africa "with the league, without the league, or against the league."

In Saturday's cabinet communique Il Duce stated his case coldly. He made it plain he would prefer to be at peace with both the league and Great Britain, but also left no doubt his mind has been made up and that he must again resume the war preparations temporarily interrupted.

Radios are Warned
Today evidence of this was on all hands. All newspapers published detailed instructions regarding the forthcoming civil and military one-day trial mobilization of 10,000,000 Italians. The ministry of press and propaganda announced all radio stations had been informed they must cease normal programs immediately when the mobilization is announced and then concentrate on dispatching instructions regarding the mobilization.

The mobilization is imminent, all newspapers stated, as a reply to the "bellicose intentions" of Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia, and best informed quarters expected it would coincide with the opening of hostilities in East Africa.

FIRST FROST HITS CIRCLEVILLE TODAY

Mercury Falls to 34 Degrees; Not Considered Killing by Clarke

"When the frost is on the pumpkin and the fiddler's in the shuck"

James Whitcomb Riley's well-known poem applied to Pickaway-co this morning. Practically all of the corn is shocked and the first frost of the year nipped the Pumpkin vines Sunday night when the temperature slumped to 34 degrees.

Dr. H. R. Clarke, local weather man, reported the frost would not be considered a "killing" frost, as all vegetables and flowers would not be affected. Pumpkin vines were wilted, he reported, along the river where he takes his temperature readings.

Dr. Clarke considered the frost unusual for this section, explaining his records show the average date for killing frosts is Oct. 18. The highest temperature reported of Sunday was 66 degrees. The unusual temperatures brought out winter suits and caused residents to start furnaces and stoves.

NEW LEXINGTON, Sept. 30

The first frost of the year here this morning was a killing one. The temperature dropped to 32 degrees and there were spotsches of ice on pools.

Receptions Prove His Continued Popularity

BOULDER CITY, Nev., Sept. 30—Gazing out over one of the engineering marvels of the ages—an artificial lake 115 miles long and hundreds of feet deep, held in check by a man-made dam 726 feet high—President Roosevelt today entered a vigorous defense of "governmental spending" and cited the enormous Boulder Dam project as an example of the usefulness of it.

WITH PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT, Sept. 30—President Roosevelt has brought to the people of the west a promise of continued benefits for agriculture and a promise of steadily reduced governmental expenditures.

Around those two propositions will be built, in large measure, the Democratic national platform for 1936, when the record of his administration faces the test at the polls.

Improvement Proved

A score of times on his journey from Washington he has "congratulated" rear platform audiences in the west because of improved conditions, and the answering applause has been convincing evidence that between the Alleghenies and the Rockies economic

Corn Cutter, Drunk, Gives Police Chase

It took two police officers and several citizens to put Roy Conley, 28, fleet-footed Kentucky corn cutter, in city jail Sunday afternoon. This afternoon it will take $100 and costs to get him out.

Chief William McCrady and Officer Fred Fitzpatrick arrested Conley on S. Scioto-st. for intoxication. They put him in the police car and started after his companion, also intoxicated.

Conley stepped out of the police car and ran, with the officers and several residents taking part in the chase. The officers reported Boyce Parks, former high school and C. A. C. athlete, ended the chase with a beautiful tackle.

Mayor W. B. Cady handed out the fine Monday morning on a charge of resisting an officer. Conley was sent to the county jail for failure to pay.

"He was the fastest running drunken man I ever chased," the police chief said.

CADY FINES TWO

Two fines were handed out in police court Saturday morning by Mayor W. B. Cady.

Harold Gatten, 32, Columbus, was assessed $25 and costs for operating an auto without license plates. Gatten was arrested Friday night. Police confiscated his car, a Hudson sedan, until the fine and costs are paid.

Avery Calvin, 35, corn cutter of Flemingsburg, Ky., was sent to the county jail for failure to settle a fine of $10 and costs for being drunk and disorderly.

TRUCKER WHO HIT CITY OFFICER'S CAR FINED $100

Henry Goedeke, truck driver, Deshler, paid a fine of $100 and costs in common pleas court Saturday morning for failure to stop after an auto accident.

An indictment was returned against Goedeke by the county grand jury, based on a collision on Route 23, south of Circleville, June 28, when a truck driver by Goedeke collided with the auto of City Patrolman Fred Fitzpatrick.

J. P. Jester Purchases Late Mother's Land

Joseph P. Jester, Columbus, son of the late Mrs. Ellen Jester, New Holland, purchased his mother's property consisting of a residence and six acres of land for $2,500 Saturday afternoon at sheriff's sale.

The property is located at the edge of New Holland. It had been appraised at $2,600.

Sheriff Absolves Truck Driver in Koon Death; Body Taken South

Two Charleston, W. Va., youths held for investigation in the death of William Koon, 25, of Raceland, Ky., in a hit-skip auto accident Thursday night, were released from the county jail Saturday afternoon absolved of blame in connection with the mishap.

Emerson Burgess, 22, driver of the truck, paid a fine of $25 and costs to H. O. Eveland, justice of peace, for using fictitious tags. Officers said he was using dealer licenses on a commercial car.

The other youth held was Thomas Dodd, 20, a passenger in the truck.

Members of the sheriff's department said they expected to continue their investigation of the accident.

The body of Koon was taken to his home Saturday for funeral services and burial.

SIX BURNED IN APARTMENT FIRE

CHICAGO, Sept. 30—Seven persons died and a dozen others were injured early today when fire swept a west side tenement house.

Frank Vitale, owner of a grocery store in the building, was seized by police in connection with the fire. Vitale admitted he had $3,000 insurance on the store, and had closed his store on Sunday for the first time in fifteen years, but denied any knowledge of the blaze.

CHICAGO, Sept. 30—A firebug was blamed today for the murder of six persons—three women, two children and a man.

They were killed and eleven others seriously injured when a terrific explosion and a roaring fire completely destroyed a three-story brick apartment building. Chief Fire Marshall Michael P. Corrigan charged that the firebug had splashed gasoline about the front stairway of the building, touched it off.

So swiftly did the flames spread that all avenues of escape were cutoff, and families living on the upper floors were trapped.

Many children were injured in jumping from upper windows and others were horribly burned before being rescued and carried down ladders by firemen.

The dead are Mrs. Rose Angel-sano, 45; her daughter, Rachel, 24; Virginia Grasso, 16; Pasqualina Cappolo, 10, her brother Philip, 5, and Joseph Grasso, 50.

Mobilization of His Forces to Be Ordered 'Within Few Days'

ROME, Sept. 30—After having been slowed up temporarily by the League of Nations and British moves in the Mediterranean, Premier Benito Mussolini today ordered full speed ahead as he plunged Italy forward toward war with Ethiopia within a few days.

The unexpectedly solid league front formed at Geneva in opposition to an Italian invasion of Ethiopia and the surprising action of Great Britain in rushing warships and fighting planes to the Mediterranean two weeks ago compelled Il Duce to pause and consider his projected war again.

Meant Statement

Now, after considering the situation in all its aspects, Premier Mussolini has made it clear he meant what he said when he declared he would obtain what he wanted in East Africa "with the league, without the league, or against the league."

In Saturday's cabinet communique Il Duce stated his case coldly. He made it plain he would prefer to be at peace with both the league and Great Britain, but also left no doubt his mind has been made up and that he must again resume the war preparations temporarily interrupted.

Radios are Warned

Today evidence of this was on all hands. All newspapers published detailed instructions regarding the forthcoming civil and military one-day trial mobilization of 10,000,000 Italians. The ministry of press and propaganda announced all radio stations had been informed they must cease normal programs immediately when the mobilization is announced and then concentrate on dispatching instructions regarding the mobilization.

The mobilization is imminent, all newspapers stated, as a reply to the "bellicose intentions" of Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia, and best informed quarters expected it would coincide with the opening of hostilities in East Africa.

FIRST FROST HITS CIRCLEVILLE TODAY

Mercury Falls to 34 Degrees; Not Considered Killing by Clarke

"When the frost is on the pumpkin and the fodder's in the shock"

James Whitcomb Riley's well-known poem applied to Pickaway-co this morning. Practically all of the corn is "shocked" and the first frost of the year nipped the Pumpkin vines Sunday night when the temperature slumped to 34 degrees.

Dr. H. R. Clarke, local weatherman, reported the frost would not be considered a "killing" frost, as all vegetables and flowers would not be affected. Pumpkin vines were wilted, he reported, along the river where he takes his temperature readings.

Dr. Clarke considered the frost unusual for this section, explaining his records show the average date for killing frosts is Oct. 18.

The highest temperature reported Sunday was 66 degrees. The unusual temperatures brought out winter suits and caused residents to start furnaces and stoves.

NEW LEXINGTON, Sept. 30—

The first frost of the year here this morning was a killing one. The temperature dropped to 32 degrees and there were splashes of ice on pools.

SHERIDAN DENIES SOLICITING MONEY

COLUMBUS, Sept. 30—Plea of not guilty was entered today by Joe Sheridan, an official of the city water division, when arraigned before Police Judge Harold Kime on charges of soliciting and receiving money from city civil service employees to promote the candidacy of Mayor Henry Worley for re-election.

Sheridan's case was continued to Oct. 16. He remained at liberty in $500 bond.

Earl W. Baird, city civil service commission president, preferred the charges against Sheridan.

The other auto, a Willys Knight roadster, was driven by W. H. McLaughlin, McClain-rd, Columbus. Mr. McLaughlin had stopped at the home of his mother, Mrs. Ann J. City, County Teachers Enjoy Splendid Program

One of the red-letter days for the teachers of the city and county systems was last Saturday when they met in joint session in the high school building. The teachers of Circleville for the second consecutive year sponsored the event.

Adding very much to the gala spirit of the social get-together were music and flowers and a general spirit of friendliness. This was particularly in evidence throughout the luncheon hours in the gymnasium which had been transformed into a place of beauty for the occasion.

Leading Thinker

Several of the speakers were people eminent in their fields. One of them, Dr. Boyd H. Bode, of Ohio State university, has recently received the outstanding distinction of being named "America's leading educational thinker" by a group chosen for the purpose. His address was a masterpiece of wit and wholesome philosophy.

More specifically useful were the remarks of Miss Frances Mason, arithmetic specialist of Chicago, on that important subject. Miss Mason has pleased Circleville audiences before and for that reason was invited back.

Dr. Otto Mees, president of Capital university, gave the afternoon address at an informal session. His topic for the hour was "The Quest for the Four-Leaf Clover."

Music Helps, Too

Miss Eleanor Snyder and Franklin Price delighted the audience with their vocal music. Throughout the luncheon Hilaire Haecker gave a program on piano and accordion.

Presiding at the sessions was Virgil M. Cress, president of the Circleville City Teachers' association.

Registrations for the day totaled 200 of the city and county educators. The Circleville system had a one hundred per cent attendance.

JURY TO VOTE ON SHERMAN'S CHARGE TODAY

Fate of Big Choir-Singer to Be Decided At Close of Arguments

WORCESTER, Mass., Sept. 30.—The fate of Newell Paige Sherman, 26, the psalm-singing scoutmaster of Sutton, accused of the murder of his wife, Alice, 22, goes into the hands of a jury of 12 men today.

Death in the electric chair, imprisonment, freedom to return to his two babies—any one of these conclusions may be written into Worcester County's "American Tragedy."

But whatever ending it brings, the last chapter of this real-life parallel to Theodore Dreiser's story of life and love and death will be packed with drama of the most intense sort.

In its final argument the commonwealth will brand Sherman as a cold-blooded murderer and hypocrite, a man who sang in the village choir on Sunday but rined on Monday, a man who lured Boy Scouts on the benefits of right living while cheating his family, a man who mercifully murdered his lawful mate in order to marry an illicit sweetheart.

Lawyers for the defense will picture the 221-pound defendant as the innocent victim of cruel circumstances. It will call the drowning of Alice Dudley Sherman accidental.

There is the exciting possibility Sherman may raise his eloquent baritone voice in his own defense. Under an ancient Massachusetts law the former pep talker at Boy Scout rallies may say the last word to the jury.

Sherman was alternately sullen and hopeful as the end of his trial neared.

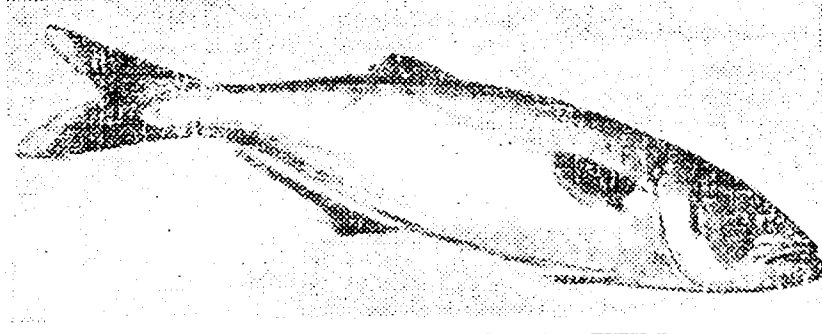

"I hope they will free me for the sake of my babies," he said. "God knows I am innocent. And my babies need their father."

He spoke reassuringly to his gray-haired father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis P. Sherman, respected members of their community, who were his last visitors in jail.

As the hulking choir singer waited for the hour of judgment, his husky, disheveled sweetheart, 18-year-old Esther Magill, announced she forgave him for his unchivalrous disclosure of intimate relations between them in the back seat of his automobile during a midnight tryst along a highway.

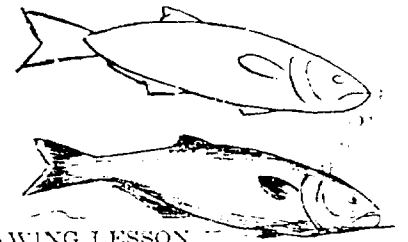

"I'd hate to see him go to the electric chair," the red-lipped "other woman" of the tragic small-town triangle said. "He was always nice to me."

CHARACTERISTICS
Average weight four pounds (22 maximum); symmetrical. Color—steel blue.

TODAY'S DRAWING LESSON

Traveling in large schools, bluefishes move along like a pack of hungry wolves, destroying everything before them in pursuit of fish not much smaller in size. Incredible as it may seem, it has been estimated that this species eats or destroys ten thousand million other fish every day, each bluefish consuming 10 others daily. No fish of his size is more wild when hooked for he is one of the most active and unyielding fish that swim. The bluefish ranks as one of the best food fishes.

67 GUPPIES AT ONCE

WELLESLEY, Mass. Guppies come and guppies go, but to the little mother guppy belonging to Reginald V. Yeomans must go the prize. Although guppy breeders will tell you that the record number of offspring at a single instance is but 60, Yeomans counted just 67 from his record holder. But like all fish stories, there was a hitch. It seems Yeomans fed the first 17 tiny arrivals to his sword-tail fish before realizing his guppy was out for a record.

DILEMMA FOR DIRECTORS

WHETHER or not one feels called upon to shed a tear out of sympathy for the directors of motion pictures in their latest difficulty, one has no difficulty in understanding their complaint against the universal plan of human growth.

In the relentless working of that plan, children between the ages of six and eight years progressively lose their first set of teeth. It is a fact which traditionally has been the source of annoyance and embarrassment in juvenile circles, but which heretofore had not been among the serious problems of the adult world. But now, from the point of view of the Hollywood director, we gather the sudden appearance of a gap in the dental equipment of the child star is far from a mirth-provoking matter.

A graphic picture is painted of how a recent production in which the most popular child on the screen was being starred was saved from confusion and possible disaster only by the heroic efforts of a dentist, who supplied Shirley Temple with such a perfect bridge that confirmed Shirley Temple fans did not know that she has lost a tooth after the picture was in production. Another young actress is reported to have lost three teeth in succession under circumstances that meant agony for her director.

The American motion picture public, which will put up with a toothless smile from junior at home, apparently will not tolerate one from its favorite child heroine in the theater.

AGAIN?

INTERNATIONAL amenities are one thing, bitter facts another. General Pershing, happy in honors bestowed upon him on his seventy-fifth birthday, doubtless realized that when he said, in dedicating the Pershing Oak at St. Mihiel, that America's war aid to France represented services for "right, liberty and justice," and added: "They were services we would be ready to give again if circumstances warranted."

The commander in chief of the A. E. F. may have put that "if" in advisably, without letting it spoil the fine flavor of his address on the battlefield American troops helped to make famous. Or it may be that the general, far removed from his native land, has failed to note the ground swell of opinion against war in general and the cynical doubts that have grown up about our participation in the war to end war.

The greatest, perhaps the sole, contribution of the World War to humanity was that it stripped war of its glamour and romance more effectively than any previous conflict. The songs of war that sounded so gay when the boys march to the transport became as dust in our mouths when the dead and wounded returned. Realization that civilization was destroying itself when its members sought each to destroy his own enemy dawned too late, though ever so bitterly. These are some things General Pershing might ponder beneath the oak at St. Mihiel.

A police judge says women now do 70 per cent of the driving. But men still hold the steering wheel.

Two thousand dollars a year is better than $10,000. Those who have $2,000 can keep up with their neighbors.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

By E. V. SHEPARD, Famous Bridge Teacher

MASTERING BRIDGE (26)

SOUND BIDDING has three primary objects: to go game, to save game or to defeat opposing calls. Partners exchange information to discover which of the three purposes they 25 cards justify. The negative 1-No Trump is employed to afford the opening bidder an opportunity to reach the best call for 25 cards, in case he becomes declarer. Only about half the hands dealt give one of the four players a chance to go game. There must be many bad games made or slight sets of weak declarations.

Outside of the negative no trump, an overall of partner's bid should be based chiefly upon probable ability to fulfill the contract undertaken. Unless able to hold or to show a second suit, an overall of partner's suit make should show at least one quick trick and three supporting tricks for partner. The more suits your side can show the greater are its chances for game, or at least obtaining the best deal call for its 25 cards.

The four hands which follow fully satisfy all demands of partner's opening bid of 1-Heart, for reasons given in each case.

The above hand has powerful support for partner's hearts, but he may have only 1 of them. Perhaps partner has 4 spades and will welcome the shift. In case partner holds 4 hearts, 3-2 spades you will be better off at spades than at hearts. Eight trumps divided 5-3 will average to win more tricks than the same number of trumps divided 4-4. Should partner rebid hearts he shows at least 5 of them and hearts must be supported, as a better call than spades.

2- \heartsuit Q J 10 5 3 \spadesuit K 9 5 \clubsuit 6 3 2 \diamond 8 6

The above hand may turn out better at spades than at hearts, but partner's minimum rebid of 2-Hearts had best be let alone. Should partner show a second suit, instead of rebidding hearts, shift him to the first suit shown, without raising the contract.

3- \heartsuit 8 6 2 \spadesuit A Q \clubsuit J 9 8 6 5 4 \diamond 7 4

Bid 2-Clubs over partner's 1-Heart in case he has 3-Hearts but 3-Clubs but pass his bid of 2-Hearts.

4- \heartsuit 7 \spadesuit K J 7 6 5 3 \clubsuit 5 \diamond Q 10 9 7 2

Bid 2-Diamonds over partner's 1-Heart. Bid 2-Clubs over his bid of 2-Hearts. Pass his 2-Hearts.

\heartsuit None \spadesuit 10 3 2 \clubsuit 7 4 \diamond A 9 6 2 \heartsuit 8 7 6 5 \spadesuit 3 2 \clubsuit K J 7 2 \diamond 9 5 \heartsuit A 8 6 5 4 \spadesuit 10 8 6 4 3 \clubsuit 7 4 \diamond A 9 6 2 \heartsuit 8 7 6 5 \spadesuit 3 2 \clubsuit K J 7 2 \diamond 9 5

The Romance Racket

READ THIS FIRST:

Wear, parties, pretty clothes and beautiful things unattractive Carol Kennedy had never desired until she looked into the eyes of Dr. Owen Craig, fiancé of her cousin, Kathy Prentice. Kathy is marrying Owen for his social prestige only. When Carol comes into a vast fortune, she suddenly decides to give up her home in Connecticut, where she had lived as an orphan, and seek freedom and happiness in New York City. Isobel Bronson, an old school chum, takes Carol to her first cocktail party where she meets Gary Grandall, attractive playboy who tells her he will help her find a job and, knowing nothing of her wealth, shows her how to become a fascinating woman. He promises to take her to a beauty shop. Isobel helps Carol buy more clothes and tells her that her cousin, Kathy, is not in love with Dr. Craig, being more interested in Gary Grandall. Carol runs into Owen and when he takes her to lunch, they strike up a friendship. Carol goes to her cousin's rescue but the luncheon is not a success. Carol emerges from the beauty shop a most attractive girl. Isobel helps Carol find an apartment and, with Gary's help, they furnish it. At a party where a friend of Gary's appears to love Carol as his secretary, she meets Manfred Morris, theatrical producer, who is attracted to her. (NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)

CHAPTER 13

AT QUARTER after 10 Carol gave the smallest sigh and pressed the elevator bell. Her feet ached with weariness from dancing the night before and for the past hour and a half she had walked the corridors tracing and retracing her footsteps before the locked door of Ned Banks's office. He had told her to be there at nine and she had arrived at quarter of the hour. Perhaps he had forgotten. Perhaps he had overslept. Well, no use waiting any longer. Carol decided she would call back later.

Park avenue was bright white in the April sunshine. Radiance dragged at her limbs but there was an exhilaration in the air and all the excitement that seethed in her spirit responded to it. She wanted to skip as she had when she was a little girl. She wanted to sing the dance tune that lingered in her ears. She wanted to talk to another girl. For the first time in her life she wanted to talk about clothes and beaux and romances. She wanted to compare notes. Poor little rich girl. She sighed to herself as she thought of a phrase. How frightfully poor she had been, she reflected as she thought of those years in her teens so barren of fun. No longer, no longer, her heart sang.

She was content with so little. She, who might have bought herself a palatial apartment, was thrilled at the two-room nest on the East river. The new frocks in the tiny closet brought her fresh delight each time she opened the closet door. Each new contrivance was a thrill to her and she looked forward to working at any job—because then she would have a definite significance to her life. True, Carol wanted fun but she wanted something infinitely more important than that, and physical pursuits would never satisfy her. So sudden had been the change in the pattern of her life these past few weeks that she had neither time nor experience enough to form a plan of what she wanted to do. She knew only that her blind instinct to live an independent life, to live as other girls did filling her time with useful work and waiting for destiny to turn up the other side, would fill her life more richly than she had ever known it might be.

Perhaps Banks had forgotten his promise last night. Perhaps he would not even remember her name. No matter, there must be other jobs. It was only at that moment that Carol remembered the man on the street. "I told you so!" Isobel commented. "Darling, Ned Banks is out! Absolutely. Positively. Completely. I hate to blast your dreams and if you were some poor little girl who needed the money for the rent I'd tell you to go ahead and hang on to it as long as you could but you don't need the job that badly."

"Oh, Isobel, you make me feel like Mary's little lamb or something. I can take care of myself."

"Really?" Isobel queried pleasantly. "My sweet, you have the most perfect facility for meeting the wrong people. No—I don't mean that exactly. Gary Grandall is all right, if you know him. And, I suppose Ned Banks is, too, but my child, I just don't think that you are fast enough for that whole crowd. They're not bad but they've just gotten into some easy-going habits that aren't in your line."

"For instance?" Today Ned's intentions may be perfectly honorable. He may need a secretary and he may think that's what he would engage you for. But you've grown to be quite an attractive lady, Miss Kennedy, and if it bursts on me so that I'm stunned, there's no reason why a gentleman who has a trained eye for attractiveness might not find you a very diverting person. Another trouble with Ned Banks is that he gets married so easy and I do think you ought to have a chance before you become the fifth or sixth wife."

Carol laughed gaily at Isobel's remark.

"It's not such a funny idea," Isobel continued. "Lots of girls get married, you know. In fact I'm thinking of it myself, if I could only get John planned down to a proposal. I have an idea he might if I'd give up the office."

"You wouldn't do that, would you?" Carol asked gravely.

"In a minute," Isobel answered. "Never fool yourself into thinking that a career is to be compared with a husband."

AT THE GRAND

Dick Powell went to school to preclude the possibility of being told he "doesn't act the part" in his current screen role in the Warner Bros. picture, "Broadway Gondolier," at the Grand Theatre.

AT THE CLIFTONA

A kissless bride craving affection starts the grandest since the walls of Jericho fell in "It Happened One Night" with the same star, Claudette Colbert, grandest now in her grandest, as the lovelorn secretary in "She Married Her Boss" playing at the Cliftona Theatre today and tomorrow.

AT THE CIRCLE

Every girl fell for him at a glance... but it took a long and a merry chase and many a sore-made for him to finally win the girl he fell for at a glance.

This, in brief, is the story of "My Song For You," starring Jack Kennedy, the lovelorn divine with the voice divine, in the GE Picture showing today at the Circle Theatre.

AT THE CIRCLE

After her marriage to her employer, the battle rages with no holds barred except kissing in the clinches. And the secretary's disappointment when she discovers the romance she dreamed about was merely a dream, and how she eventually makes it a reality, create some of the most intensely humorous situations, making of the picture one of the outstanding of the season.

Great Forgotten Man

Remembered as FDR Inspects Boulder Dam

WASHINGTON—If there are such things as ghosts or heavenly spirits, one of them must be watching the President today (Monday) as he inspects the mightiest dam the world has ever seen the handwork of this man long ago planned and conceived.

Almost forgotten today is Arthur Powell Davis, first father of Boulder Dam. Young age, an chief engineer of the Reclamation Service, and later its director, he planned the great project being dedicated today.

For years the Davis report was the Bibles for Boulder Dam. Then in 1923—six years before the Dam was fought through Congress—Davis found himself too liberal for the Harding administration and was fired.

We went on to other things, notably the giant Mohave River project which supplies San Francisco and the valley with water. But as far as Boulder Dam was concerned, he was forgotten.

Until Secretary of the Interior, remembered, called him back to Washington, gave him a special title in recognition of his services.

One month later Davis died.

Three Step-Fathers

Three others stand alongside A. P. Davis as the fathers of Boulder Dam.

They are Senator Hiram Johnson, ex-Congressman Phil Swing, of California, and Elwood Mead, who succeeded Davis as Director of Reclamation.

Mead is now 77 years old, having about 57 of those years he supervised irrigation and reclamation projects in the Far West, in Australia, in Palestine, in Austria and Germany, until he became the foremost land settlement authority of his day.

And during the last twenty of those years he has fought the fight of Boulder Dam. One arm cut off almost at his shoulder, he detestable despise his years.

Mead has piercing blue eyes that give only a hint of the fire that burns beneath his noble forehead.

Swing and Johnson

Phil Swing was elected to Congress from San Diego in 1920 or the sole platform of passing the Boulder Dam Bill. Prior to election he had helped organize the Imperial Irrigation District and was one of the greatest irrigation advocates in California.

Boulder Dam was approved by Congress in 1929. The next year following, Swing was defeated by a Democrat.

But both Swing and Mead would have failed had it not been for the ball-bag tenacity of Hiram Johnson.

Johnson introduced the Boulder Dam Bill in the Senate even before Swing was elected to Congress. Every session it was re-introduced. Every year he crept closer to his goal.

And if any one individual can rank with Davis as the father of Boulder Dam, it is the irascible, battle-hardened, uncompromising, venerable Senator from California, who drove to a final conclusion the idea Davis conceived.

Itinerant Ambassador

When the Brazilian Ambassador, who beat Roosevelt to Boulder Dam by a month, registered at the hotel in Las Vegas, he was "Oswaldo Aranha, 3000 Massachusetts Ave., Washington, D. C."

He wanted to remain incognito, confident that no one in that community of ranchers and construction workers, 2,500 miles from Washington, ever had heard of him.

The incognito worked, and he spent the evening making conversation with anyone who would talk to him about the Dam, the New Deal, and the desert.

But at breakfast next morning his luck changed. The waitress put a cup of coffee at his right, little book in front of him, and said: "Mr. Ambassador, would you kindly give me your autograph?"

Factographs

The Baker and the Baker's Wife were names popularly given to Louis XVI and Marie Antoinette because they gave bread to the starving mob at Versailles on Oct. 6, 1793.

Steamers are called tramp steamers when they do not belong to any regular steamship company, but are operated by individuals.

The longest canal in the world is the Grand Canal of China. This canal is 1,000 miles long, extending from Hangchow to Peking. It is about 2,500 years old.

The fact that foam generally appears white is due to its composed of tiny bubbles which reflect the light from their surfaces.

No one in Ambassador Aranha's party has yet been able to figure out how she discovered his identity. But they suspect the chauffeur.

Concrete Facts

The dam the President views today is the latest in the world—726 feet high, the widest. Even in the dam's case, laid on its side, it would still be the world's tallest. Boulder-dam water from the grand old dam has created the world's largest artificial lake. Now 50 miles long, eventually it will be 115 miles long, and contain 30,000,000 cubic yards of water. Cost of the project will be $165,000,000.

to be repaid to the Federal Government in fifty years through the sale of power. All available power is already contracted for by the Los Angeles municipal power company and private California interests. Water from the dam will irrigate 2,100,000 acres of land. The dam will also make the lower Colorado navigable and free from Northwest drought.

DILEMMA FOR DIRECTORS

Whether or not one feels called upon to shed a tear out of sympathy for the directors of motion pictures in their latest difficulty, one has no difficulty in understanding their complaint against the universal plan of human growth.

In the relentless working of that plan, children between the ages of six and eight years progressively lose their first set of teeth. It is a fact which traditionally has been the source of annoyance and embarrassment in juvenile circles, but which heretofore had not been among the serious problems of the adult world. But now, from the point of view of the Hollywood director, we gather the sudden appearance of a gap in the dental equipment of the child star is far from a mirth-provoking matter.

A graphic picture is painted of how a recent production in which the most popular child on the screen was being starred was saved from confusion and possible disaster only by the heroic efforts of a dentist, who supplied Shirley Temple with such a perfect bridge that confirmed Shirley Temple fans did not know that she has lost a tooth after the picture was in production. Another young actress is reported to have lost three teeth in succession under circumstances that meant agony for her director.

The American motion picture public, which will put up with a toothless smile from junior at home, apparently will not tolerate one from its favorite child heroine in the theater.

AGAIN?

INTERNATIONAL amenities are one thing, bitter facts another. General Pershing, happy in honors bestowed upon him on his seventy-fifth birthday, doubtless realized that when he said, in dedicating the Pershing Oak at St. Mihiel, that America's war aid to France represented services for "right, liberty and justice," and added: "They were services we would be ready to give again if circumstances warranted."

The commander in chief of the A. E. F. may have put that "if" in advisedly, without letting it spoil the fine flavor of his address on the battlefield American troops helped to make famous. Or it may be that the general, far removed from his native land, has failed to note the ground swell of opinion against war in general and the cynical doubts that have grown up about our participation in the war to end war.

The greatest, perhaps the sole, contribution of the World war to humanity was that it stripped war of its glamour and romance more effectively than any previous conflict. The songs of war that sounded so gay when the boys march to the transport became as dust in our mouths when the dead and wounded returned. Realization that civilization was destroying itself when its members sought each to destroy his own enemy damned too late, though ever so bitterly. These are some things General Pershing might ponder beneath the Oak at St. Mihiel.

A police judge says women now do 70 per cent of the driving. But men still hold the steering wheel.

Two thousand dollars a year is better than $10,000. Those who have $2,000 can keep up with their neighbors.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

By E. V. SHEPARD, Famous Bridge Teacher

MASTERING BRIDGE (26) SOUND BIDDING has three primary objects: to go game, to save game or to defeat opposing calls. Partners exchange information to discover who of the three purposes they 26 cards justify. The negative 1-No Trump is employed to afford the opening bidder an opportunity to reach the best call for 26 cards, in case he becomes declarer. Only about half the hands dealt give one of the four players a chance to go game. There must be many part scores made or slight sets of weak declarations.

Outside of the negative no trump, an overall of partner's bid should be based chiefly upon probable ability to fulfill the contract undertaken. Unless able to rebid or to show a second suit, an overall of partner's suit make should show at least one quick trick and three supporting tricks for partner. The more suits your side can show the greater are the chances for game, or at least obtaining the best final call for its 26 cards.

The four hands which follow justify suit overalls of partner's opening bid of 1-Heart, for reasons given in each case.

1-A K Q 8 4 7 9 7 5 4 A 8 2

The above hand has powerful support for partner's hearts, but he may have only 4 of them. Perhaps partner has 4 spades and will welcome the shift. In case partner holds 4 hearts and 3 spades you will be better off at spades than at hearts. Eight trumps divided 5-3 will average to win more tricks than the same number of trumps divided 4-4. Should partner rebid hearts he should at least 5 of them and hearts must be supported, as a better call than spades.

2-A Q J 10 5 3 6 3 2 K 9 5 8 6

The above hand may turn out better at spades than at hearts, but partner's minimum rebid of 2-Hearts had best be let alone. Should partner show a second suit, instead of rebidding hearts, shift him to the first suit shown, without raising the contract.

3-A 8 6 2 7 4 J 9 8 6 5 4

Bid 2-Clubs over partner's 1-Heart. In case he bids 2-Hearts bid 3-Clubs but pass his bid of 3-Hearts.

4-A 7 5 K J 7 6 5 3 Q 10 9 7 2

Bid 2-Diamonds over partner's 1-Heart. Bid 3-Clubs over his bid of 2-Hearts. Pass his 3-Hearts.

None J 7 4 8 7 6 5 Q 10 8 6 4 3

There is no score. South bids 1-Spade. Before tomorrow think what procedure will pay East and West best?

The Romance Racket

MARIE BLIZARD

READ THIS FIRST:

Fun, parties, pretty clothes and beaux are things unattractive Carol Kennedy had never desired until she looked into the eyes of Dr. Owen Craig, fiancé of her cousin, Kathy. Kathy is social prestige only. When Carol comes into a vast fortune, she suddenly decides to give up her old home in Connecticut, where she had lived as an orphan, and seek freedom and happiness in New York City. Isobel Bronson, an old school chum, takes Carol to her first cocktail party where she meets Gary Crandall, attractive playboy who tells her he will help her find a job and, knowing nothing of her wealth, shows her how to become a fascinating woman. He promises to take her to a beauty shop. Isobel helps Carol buy more clothes and tells her that her cousin, Kathy, is not in love with Dr. Craig, being more interested in Gary Crandall. Carol runs into Owen and, when he takes her to lunch, they stumble onto Kathy and Gary together. Carol comes to her cousin's rescue but the luncheon is not a success. Carol emerges from the beauty shop a most attractive girl. Isobel helps Carol find an apartment and, with Gary's help, they furnish it. At a party where a friend of Gary's agrees to hire Carol as his secretary, she meets Manfred Morris, theatrical producer, who is attracted to her. (NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)

AT QUARTER after 10 Carol gave the smallest sigh and pressed the elevator bell. Her feet ached with weariness from dancing the night before and for the past hour and a half she had walked the corridor tracing and retracing her footsteps before the locked door of Ned Banks' office. He had told her to be there at nine and she had arrived at quarter of the hour. Perhaps he had forgotten. Perhaps he had overslept. Well, no use waiting any longer. Carol decided she would call back later.

Park avenue was bright white in the April sunshine. Fatigue dragged at her limbs but there was an exhilaration in the air and all the excitement that seethed in her spirit responded to it. She wanted to skip as she had when she was a little girl. She wanted to sing the dance tune that lingered in her ears. She wanted to talk to another girl. For the first time in her life she wanted to talk about clothes and beaux and romances. She wanted to compare notes. Poor little rich girl. She laughed to herself as she thought of a phrase. The new frocks in the tiny closet brought her fresh delight each time she opened the closet door. Each new contact was a thrill to her and she looked forward to working—at any job—because then she would have a definite significance to her life. True, Carol wanted fun but she wanted something infinitely more important than that and playful pursuits would never satisfy her. So sudden had been the change in the pattern of her life these past few weeks that she had neither time nor experience enough to form a plan of what she wanted to do. She knew only that her blind instinct to live an independent life, to live as other girls did filling her time with useful work and waiting for destiny to turn up the other side, would fill her life more richly than she had ever known it might be.

Perhaps Banks had forgotten his promise last night. Perhaps he would not even remember her name. No matter, there must be other jobs. It was only at that moment that Carol remembered the man on the terrace. Manfred Morris. His card was in her pocketbook. She had put it there this morning when she had taken her key and vanity from the evening bag.

She simply had to talk to someone about it. She quickened her pace and turned east towards Madison avenue and Isobel's office.

"This is no time to start job-hunting," Isobel told her over their coffee a few minutes later. "You're supposed to start at 9 a. m."

Then Carol told her about the party the night before. About the casual air of Ned Banks and the job he had promised her.

"I told you so!" Isobel commented. "Darling, Ned Banks is out! Absolutely. Positively. Completely. I hate to blast your dreams and if you were some poor little gal who needed the money for the rent I'd tell you to go ahead and hang on to it as long as you could but you don't need the job that badly."

"Oh, Isobel, you make me feel like Mary's little lamb or something. I can take care of myself."

"Really?" Isobel queried pleasantly. "My sweet, you have the most perfect faculty for meeting the wrong people. No... I don't mean that. You are very dignified, person. Another trouble with Ned Banks is that he gets married so easily and I do think you ought to have a chance before you become the fifth or sixth wife."

Carol laughed gaily at Isobel's last remark. "It's not such a funny idea," Isobel continued. "Lots of girls get married, you know. In fact I'm thinking of it myself, if I could only get John pinned down to a proposal. I have an idea he might if I'd give up the office."

"You wouldn't do that, would you?" Carol asked gravely. "In a minute," Isobel answered. "Never fool yourself into thinking that a career is to be compared with a husband."

"I... I'm going to have the career," Carol answered. There was only one man she had ever met who might have made her feel the way

Isobel did and that man belonged to someone else. "Seriously, what kind?" Isobel pushed away her coffee and lit a cigarette. "Suppose you do get this job with Ned Banks, answering the telephone isn't going to give you any experience that would start you on a career. I'd offer you a job with us but we close the office in June and July and our season doesn't start until autumn. Any other offers?"

"Oh, yes, of course!" Carol brought the card from her pocketbook. "I know you'd knock everybody cold in that little race but, darling, Manfred Morris! Didn't he say anything else but 'Come and see me'?" "Not a word. What do you suppose he meant by that?"

"Oh!" Isobel groaned. "What do you think he meant? With an invitation like that you go bleating about a career as secretary to Ned Banks! At least a million girls would have been at his office at six this morning waiting to see him. I happen to know he's casting this very week for his new show, 'Stellar Performance'. If he doesn't offer you a job in the show, I'll eat my brand new Rehearsal hat."

"This is nonsense, Isobel, I couldn't. I'm the last person in the world..."

"You couldn't act, eh? Well, my lady, you've been giving one of the best performances I've seen in years in real life. You tie yourself right over to his office this afternoon. Waitress..."

Carol faced a blur of beauty, Platinum blondes and red-tipped lovelies. Silver foxes and silken legs. Mascaraed eyes that stared frankly at her as she made her way through the room crowded with beautiful girls to the rail that protected the un-beautiful secretary within.

"What is it?" she asked coldly as Carol timidly extended her visiting card.

"May I see Mr. Morris, please? Will you take him my card?"

"What's it about?" she asked crisply.

"Why...?" Carol didn't know herself what it might be about. "I think if you take him my card he will understand."

The other girl didn't answer but, taking the card, disappeared through the door marked PRIVATE. She came back scarcely a minute later and handed Carol's card back to her. "He says he doesn't know you."

She said it loud enough for the others to hear and felt her cheeks burning with humiliation. Carol turned and with her shoulders stiff and her head up, she walked to the door. Her hand was on the doorknob when the other office door opened.

"Hey! You in the blue suit! Miss Kennedy!" It was Manfred's voice. "Come in. Come in," he said impatiently. "I just had a wire from Hollywood about you."

In a complete daze, Carol preceded him into his luxurious office. Hollywood, sending a wire about her! (TO BE CONTINUED)

Great Forgotten Man Remembered as FDR Inspects Boulder Dam

WASHINGTON—If there are such things as ghosts or heavenly spirits, one of them must be watching the President today (Monday) as he inspects the mightiest dam the world has ever seen—the handiwork of this man long ago planned and conceived.

Almost forgotten today is Arthur Powell Davis, first father of Boulder Dam. Years ago, as chief engineer of the Reclamation Service, and later its director, he planned the great project being dedicated today.

No one in Ambassador Aranha's party has yet been able to figure out how she discovered his identity. But they suspect the chauffeur.

First Boulder Settlers

Despite the tributes to Boulder Dam, the Administration for months soft-pedaled the fact that new irrigable land was going to be withheld from cultivation.

Reason for this was the already existing crop surpluses and the attempt by the AAA to reduce or stabilize crop production.

Now, however, this decision has been reversed. Rex Tugwell's Rural Resettlement Administration is looking for rich areas where it can re-locate families from impoverished farming areas. It has cast covetous eyes on reclamation areas around Boulder Dam.

As a result hundreds of families from Northwest drought areas or from worn-out farms in the South and East, may be the first new settlers around the Dam.

Concrete Facts

The dam the President views today is the tallest in the world—726 feet. It is also the widest. Even if the dam were laid on its side it would still be the world's tallest. Backed-up water from the dam already has created the world's largest artificial lake. Now 85 miles long, eventually it will be 115 miles long and contain 30,000,000 cubic acres of water. Cost of the project will be $165,000,000—to be repaid to the Federal Government in fifty years through the sale of power. All available power is already contracted for by the Los Angeles municipal power company and private California interests. Water from the dam will irrigate 2,100,000 acres of land. The dam will also make the lower Colorado navigable and control floods.

What Best Medical Science Says on Subject of Acne

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

THERE IS NO subject on which this column receives more mail than that of acne. Acne, in common language, is pimples, and really refers to those permanent or recurrent crops of pimples, especially on the face and back of young people.

The chairman of the section on skin diseases of the American Medical association, this year selected acne as the subject of his address, and we may feel assured that this summarizes the best scientific medical thought on the subject.

His conclusions are not entirely cheerful, but at least they are honest conclusions, which cannot be said for the claims made by so many remedies for their treatment.

The most favorable results in treatment have been with the use of the X-ray, and with the exact dosage obtainable with a Coolidge tube it seemed for some years that little more was needed. However, early good results have not always stood up under the critical examination of time.

Treatment With Hormones

At present there has been a renewed interest in the treatment of acne with hormones of the ductless glands. This is suggested by the fact that the disease occurs almost entirely in young people, and those in whom it persists are, in most instances, females. The female hormone has been utilized in treatment for that reason.

The conclusions reached are that the treatment should be selected particularly in regard to the age of the patient. When the X-ray is used on patients under 15 years, about half of them have a relapse. Inasmuch as treatment with general and local measures has nearly as good results in these younger patients, and as the X-ray treatment consumes time and is somewhat expensive, it is advised to use the X-ray only in those patients whose acne persists after the age of 15. This includes about half of the patients.

After the age of 15 use of the X-ray is the best method of treatment, and will usually result in complete cure, although relapses are common. Very few cases persist after the age of 25, it may be encouraging to suffice to know.

About This And That In Many Sports

Ohio University on Map
We'd like to be on the campus of Ohio University today to see, hear and take part in the celebration and honors given in honor of Coach Don Peden and his stalwart boys, victors over Illinois, 6-0, in the first great upset of the current football season.

Has Two All-Stars
Peden, a native son of the Miami, has a job for life at the Athens school. His teams have been strong year after year, but last season was the most disastrous on the schedule. In Lewis and Jurovich, Peden has a couple of potential All-Americans.

Vosmik Loses Lead
According to unofficial averages, Joe Vosmik, Cleveland's slugging gardener, has lost the league batting lead to Buddy Myer of Washington by a single point.

Who Do You Like?
Who do you like in the World's series is another current question. Our average for predictions in the past several months has fallen far off and it proves costly, so we aren't guessing this time. The Tigers have a strong ball club in man power and general ability and the Cubs, blessed with a young club, is hot, so you can take your choice.

Gibbs' Guesses Well
Incidentally, Gabby Gibbs, famous character of The Herald's comic page, made some pretty good predictions last week. The only game he missed on was the Illinois-Ohio U. contest which upset everyone's chances. — Gabby will have some more predictions for next Saturday's games.

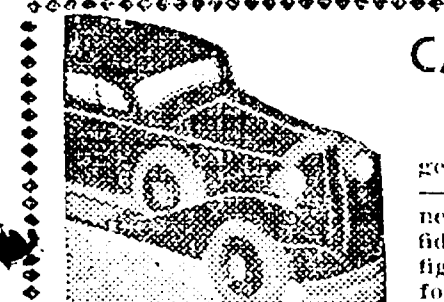

Real Grid Weather
The weather the past couple of days has made everyone really believe football weather has arrived. There'll be a lot of city and county athletes at Ohio State's game next Saturday as guests of the university. Bob Terhune, Jackson's coach, is taking every boy in school to the game.

STATE PRESERVES OPEN TO HUNTERS

About 50,000 acres of state-owned land, which have been closed as hunting territory, will be opened to Ohio sportsmen Tuesday morning for the squirrel season, according to an announcement from the state conservation department Saturday.

The territory includes the Roosevelt game preserve, the Scioto Trail state forest in Rossco, Shawnee state forest in Scioto and Adams counties, and the Pike state forest in Pike co.

The hunters will be required to check in at stations and surrender their licenses. They will be issued a red card to wear on their coats. When through hunting they check out at the stations and make a report of the game killed. No hunters may shoot more than five days in the preserves. The hunters must observe all restriction applicable to other territory in the state.

INJURIES MAY HAMPER TIGER OUTFIT FRIDAY

Friley's Tongue Cut; Henry and Jenkins Limping; Face Fast Team

The injury bug may play havoc with the plans of Coach Jack Landrum for Friday's game against Grandview, in the opener of the Central Buckeye league schedule.

Foremost among the banged-up was Wil Friley, Landrum's quarterback and acting captain in both games played this year. Friley's tongue was so badly split in Friday's game that Dr. L. E. Austin was forced to take four stitches in it. Friley took it standing up, being given no anesthetic at all. Despite the injury, it was hoped he would be ready for the Bobcat contest.

His general ability is needed.

Griffith to be Ready
John Griffith, who is just adding to get a chance to play a full game of football, is about over his shoulder injury after staying out of scrimmage since the Groveport game. Griffith's presence would be a big help to the Tigers.

Henry and Jenkins, both of whom did well against Holy Rosary's fine team, have ankle injuries slowing them down. A few light workouts will probably put both in shape for Friday.

Those four boys would be Coach Landrum's starting backfield against the team coached by Jim Scott, former Ohio State athlete. Friley would call the plays, Jenkins and Henry would be at the halves, and Griffith at fullback.

Rader May Be Guard

Then there is George Rader, who was out last week with an infected foot. Rader might be trained for a guard position where his blocking ability would help. Jim Henderson is due for a lot of work this week and so are a few other ball-toters.

Though Dave Jackson played nearly all the Romy game and lost some blood from his mouth but he'll be ready for Friday.

None of the linemen suffered injuries and all will be given work of work during the week. Landrum is still not satisfied with the blocking and tackling of his entire line. The secondary defense got about 80 per cent of the tackles in the two early games.

Grandview has a strong team and will give the Tigers a battle even if the locals are at their best.

Loss Two Tough Ones

Braun, a fullback, is tough and the remainder of the backfield, Stewart, Martin and Keener are reported fast. Grandview lost 6-0 to Columbus South and 6-0 to Columbus Academy and will be out to win from the Tigers.

NEW YORK, Sept. 30. And Hoffman will leave for California late today and when he arrives at his ranch in Fair Oaks, the fate and the future of Max Baer will be decided.

Detroit Betting Rowe to Take Warneke in First

DETROIT, Sept. 30. This town and says heavy betting will be strictly in order.

Rowe, owner of the Tigers, has changed his bleachers to take care of a crowd of 50,000 or more and he says he could fill the park with out of town fans alone. More than half a million bid for 2,500 reserved seats and Frank's headache is to devise a system whereby 500,000 will divide into 2,500 and leave none disappointed. It will be a good trick if he does it.

He is going to place more than 20,000 bleacher seats on sale the day of the first game and the ensuing fight should be reminiscent of the top-dog fight between Joe Louis and the hero No. 1 here, and Max Baer, a lad even the ladies have already forgotten.

The fans are just as much interested in Mickey Cochrane & Co. as they were a year ago but they are not going haywire as they did then. They are taking this one in stride. A few of the nuttier nuts were on hand to welcome the Tigers home at midnight last night but the rest of the natives were content to go home and dream about four straight for the Tigers.

Last year the locals were eager to lock the family guns to bet on the home guard but they're as cautious as a Scotchman with a collection plate right now. They still believe in the Tigers but won't risk more than 10 to 9 on their chances. Like Mickey Cochrane himself, they believe the series will go at least six games. However, they're willing to lay 10 to 7 Schoolboy Rowe trims Lon Warneke in the opening game Wednesday.

Some of the best scores tallied Sunday were: John Maier, 58-58, 75; Robert Musser, 40-59, 79; John Eshelman, 41-59, 80; Lent Hanson, 40-59, 80; John Bragg, 41-40, 81; Dr. Phillips, 41-41, 82; N. E. Reichelderfer, 43-41, 83; E. L. Marion, 42-42, 84; Dr. G. R. Gardner, 47-47, 95; Link Mader, 49; Dr. Stewart, 45-45, 96; Harold Grant, 48-48, 96; Max Friedman, 48-48, 95.

ONLY THREE ELEVENS WIN

Chicago and Illinois Take it On Chin; Lindberg Lost to Zuppke's Team

CHICAGO, Sept. 30. With only one Big Ten championship game scheduled for next Saturday between Northwestern and Purdue at Evanston, conference coaches today essayed to correct some of the inefficiency which retarded the carrying on of one of their number over the weekend.

Digressing somewhat from the custom of murder in the art room the Wildcats and Boil makers will fall upon each other under the floodlights at night in order to escape obscurity in the hysteria attending a world series.

Three Victories
Three of the teams—Iowa, Minnesota and Northwestern to be sure, won, but save in the case of the Hawkeyes, there was not much to be said of their performances except that you could see they were trying. Iowa piled up a 28 to 0 victory over Bradley, but Northwestern survived with a 14 to 0 triumph over De Paul (ref Chicago) only after being outplayed for three quarters, while Minnesota was anything except a steamroller in a 28 to 6 victory over North Dakota State.

Chicago absorbed a 28 to 7 drubbing from an obviously great Nebraska team which, unless the Maroons are utterly without merit, is going somewhere in the scheme of things this fall.

Illinois not only lost the ball game to Ohio U., 6 to 0, but lost its star triple-threat man, Les Lindberg, who didn't die for the orange and blue, but did break his foot and will engage in less strenuous endeavors for about five weeks. Wisconsin served notice that it is not going to revolutionize the football industry when it lost to South Dakota state, 13 to 6.

Outside the conference, Notre Dame shoved a strong Kansas team all over the premises to win, 28 to 7.

John Ziska, a famous leader of the Hussite party in Bohemia, gained the title of the father of the modern art of fortification. In 1420 he took up a strong position near Prague on an eminence since known as Ziskaberg, and held it with a few thousand men against an army of 30,000.

The Rev. James H. Mastin, Negro, today allowed as how he wished there were more Joe Louises among the brethren.

Tobacco is native to America and it is not known when nor how it was carried to Turkey.

The dealers listed are: Barrere and Nickerson, H. E. Betz and G. C. Pettit, Circleville; S. S. Scott, South Bloomsfield; A. L. Schaeffer, Turlington; D. W. Briggs, New Holland, and Virgil May, East Ringgold.

PLAN TO DEDICATE NEW CHILLICOTHE STADIUM ON OCT. 11
CHILLICOTHE, Sept. 30. Chillicothe's new stadium, will be officially dedicated Oct. 11 at 2:30 p. m. when Wilmington high meets Coach Tom Vernick eleven.

The ceremonies will be launched with flag raising exercises. The American Legion, high school band and the Legion drum corps will take part in the program.

Alvin W. Jones, chairman of the Civic council, will present the stadium to the board of education. The acceptance address will be given by Hugh M. Lynch, president of the board of education.

Chillicothe business men will be asked to close their stores for the game and take part in the dedication day exercises.

Grandview has a strong team and will give the Tigers a battle even if the locals are at their best.

Loss Two Tough Ones

Braun, a fullback, is tough and the remainder of the backfield, Stewart, Martin and Keener are reported fast. Grandview lost 6-0, to Columbus South and 6-0 to Columbus Academy and will be out to win from the Tigers.

NEW YORK, Sept. 30—Ancl Hoffman will leave for California late today and when he arrives at his ranch in Fair Oaks, the fate and the future of Max Baer will be decided.

Detroit Betting Rowe to Take Warneke in First

DETROIT, Sept. 30—This town is again the hub of the baseball universe and is duly conscious of the fact. Every hotel is swamped with reservations and packed to the doors. Salesrooms and meeting rooms have been converted into dormitories and one inebriated gent offered to pay double the regular tariff if a leading hotel would put a pillow on a billiard table for him. When last seen the gent was heading for a park bench.

And the night was colder than a jilted chorine's smile, and the weather man was not a bit encouraging. The W. M. predicts continued cold with intermittent rains.

More Seats Provided Frank Navin, owner of the Tigers, has enlarged his bleachers to take care of a crowd of 50,000 or more and he says he could fill the park with out of towners alone. More than half a million bid for some 25,000 reserved seats and Frank's headache is to devise a system whereby 500,000 will divide into 28,000 and leave none disappointed. It will be a good trick if he does it.

He is going to place more than 20,000 bleacher seats on sale the day of the first game and the ensuing fight should be reminiscent of the late unpleasantness between Joe Louis, Public Hero No. 1 here, and Max Baer, a lad even the ladies have already forgotten.

The fans are just as much interested in Mickey Cochrane & Co. as they were a year ago but they are not going haywire as they did then. They are taking this one in stride. A few of the nuttier nuts were on hand to welcome the Tigers home at midnight last night but the rest of the natives were content to go home and dream about four straight for the Tigers.

Last year the locals were eager to hook the family gems to bet on the home guard but they're as cautious as a Scotchman with a collection plate right now. They still believe in the Tigers but won't risk more than 10 to 9 on their chances. Like Mickey Cochrane himself, they believe the series will go at least six games. However, they're willing to lay 10 to 7 Schoolboy Rowe trims Len Warneke in the opening game Wednesday.

LEAGUE TITLISTS LOSE IN FINALS

NEW YORK, Sept. 30—The 1935 pennant races were claimed by history today. With the sensation of Chicago Cubs, National league flag winners, and the Detroit Tigers, American league champs, racing to get at each other in what promises to be one of the most thrilling world series on record, the ending of the loop races yesterday was strictly anti-climatical.

In spite of this, the champion Cubs and their closest rivals put on a ding-dong ball game that was probably as good a contest as any you'll see in the forthcoming classic. It was a pitcher's battle between Carleton of the Cubs and Bill McGee, rookie right-hander from the St. Louis farm at Houston. McGee held the pennant winners to 3 hits and triumphed by a score of 2 to 1. McGee's pitching probably was just the thing the Cubs needed to keep their batting eyes sharp.

The Tigers wound up their regular season by taking things comparatively easy and dropping a pair of games to the Chicago White Sox. The first game went to the Sox by a score of 3 to 2, while the second, which was halted by darkness at the end of the sixth inning, found Jimmy Dykes men leading by 14 to 2.

JOE LOUIS DROPS $100 IN CHURCH'S COLLECTION PLATE

DETROIT, Sept. 30.—The east side which is Detroit's black belt today is clamoring to run Joe Louis for state senator.

Some 7,500 of the colored brethren and sisters turned out yesterday to attend services at the Calvary Baptist church and only 2500 could be jammed into the edifice because Joe and his bride were to be present.

Joe was to have preached a sermon but instead dropped $100 in the collection plate. Three friends of Joe's each gave $5 and the other 2500 donated exactly $3.34, making the total collection $118.34. The Rev. James H. Martin, Negro, today allowed as how he wished there were more Joe Louises among the brethren.

Tobacco is native to America and it is not known when nor how it was carried to Turkey.

FRANCIS REPORTS MANY SQUIRRELS IN COUNTY WOODS

Sportsmen from all walks of life will be out to meet the dawn Tuesday, the opening day of squirrel season.

Draws when they met the rushing bass will be history to many, shotguns and rifles will replace the rod and reel.

Clarence Francis, game protector for Pickaway and Franklin counties, reports there is a good crop of squirrels this year and hunters should have plenty of good sport.

The Pickaway-co Farmer's and Sportsman's Protective association has urged hunters to purchase their licenses from dealers who use the fees collected for the propagation of game in this section. The dealers listed are: Barrere and Nickerson, H. E. Betz and G. C. Pettit, Circleville; S. S. Scott, South Bloomfield; A. L. Shaeffer, Turlington; D. W. Briggs, New Holland, and Virgil May, East Ringgold.

PLAN TO DEDICATE NEW CHILLICOTHE STADIUM ON OCT. 11

CHILLICOTHE, Sept. 30—Chillicothe's new stadium, will be officially dedicated Oct. 11 at 2:30 p. m. when Wilmington high meets Coach Tom Vornia's eleven. The ceremonies will be launched with flag raising exercises. The American Legion, high school band and the Legion drum corps will take part in the program.

Alvin W. Jones, chairman of the Civic council, will present the stadium to the board of education. The acceptance address will be given by Hugh M. Lynch, president of the board of education.

Chillicothe business men will be asked to close their stores for the game and take part in the dedication day exercises.

ONLY THREE ELEVENS WIN

Chicago and Illinois Take it On Chin; Lindberg Lost to Zupple's Team

CHICAGO, Sept. 30—With only one Big Ten championship game scheduled for next Saturday between Northwestern and Purdue at Evanston, conference coaches today essayed to correct some of the inefficiencies which marked the carrying on of five of their number over the week-end.

Digressing somewhat from the custom of murder is the afternoon, the Wildcats and Boilermakers will fall upon each other under the floodlights at night in order to escape obscurity in the hysteria attending a world series.

Three Victories

Three of the teams—Iowa, Minnesota and Northwestern—to be sure, won, but save in the case of the Hawkeyes, there was not much to be said of their performances except that you could see they were trying. Iowa piled up a 28 to 0 victory over Bradley, but Northwestern survived with a 14 to 0 triumph over De Paul (of Chicago) only after being outplayed for three quarters, while Minnesota was anything except a steam-roller in a 26 to 6 victory over North Dakota State.

Chicago absorbed a 28 to 7 drubbing from an obviously great Nebraska team which, unless the Maroons are utterly without merit, is going somewhere in the scheme of things this fall.

Illinois not only lost the ball game to Ohio U. 6 to 0, but lost its star triple-threat man, Les Lindberg, who didn't die for the orange and blue, but did break his foot and will engage in less strenuous endeavors for about five weeks. Wisconsin served notice that it is not going to revolutionize the football industry when it lost to South Dakota state, 13 to 6.

Outside the conference, Notre Dame shoved a strong Kansas team all over the premises to win, 25 to 7.

John Ziska, a famous leader of the Hussite party in Bohemia, gained the title of the father of the modern art of fortification. In 1420 he took up a strong position near Prague on an eminence since known as Ziskaberg, and held it with a few thousand men against an army of 30,000.

COUNTY BUCKEYE CROP REPORTED SMALL BY REID

The buckeye trees are fast disappearing from the high sections of the county and are increasing in the lowlands. High waters deposit the buckeyes along the fertile river lowlands. Mr. Reid reported this year's crop of buckeyes is very small.

Mr. Reid explained an easy way to distinguish the buckeye tree. The tree has five leaflets, rough, warty seed coverings and the eye is ordinarily about the size of a dime. The horse chestnut, a close relative to the buckeye, has seven leaflets, the seed coverings are smooth and the eyes of the seed are much larger.

conditions have improved materially. There is fresh paint on the barns, and the roads that have paralleled his train have been filled with shiny, new automobiles that were not visible when last he crossed the continent. However, unpopular the AAA may be in the east, which is paying the processing taxes, and whatever the AAA may or may not have had to do with improving conditions, there is no question of the AAA's popularity in the nation's bread basket. It has put millions of dollars into pocket pockets and they like the angle.

And he's pledged his administration to its continuance. He did that on Saturday in Nebraska, in a broadcast throughout the farming states.

Pledges Reduction

Today, he promised that these benefits would be accompanied by steadily reduced federal expenditures for relief and that there would be no need for additional taxes beyond the schedules now in effect. But he coupled this latter promise with a reservation to the effect that if the Supreme court cracks out the AAA, which would also knock out the processing taxes, then some additional taxation may be necessary to carry out existing contracts.

In his summation of the budget figures, past, present, and future made public on his train, as it rolled through Utah, Mr. Roosevelt forecast steadily increasing revenue and steadily decreasing expenditure.

"The 1937 budget," he said, "is now being prepared with a view to sharply decreasing the spread between income and outgo. Thus it is clear to me that the federal government under provisions of present tax schedules will not need new taxes nor increased rates in existing taxes to meet the expense of its necessary annual operations and to retire its public debt."

But, he warned, the estimate of receipts "contemplate continued collection of the processing taxes."

"If the attack which has been made on this act (the AAA) is sustained we will have to face the problem of financing existing contracts for benefit payments out of some form of new taxes."

Mr. Roosevelt said the present underlying tax structure of the country "is now stronger than ever before in our history" and that "the prevailing rate of recovery points to a speedy decline of federal expenditures for emergency purposes."

job. He quickly organized his eight workers. Pressman George Bonds and a couple of helpers had previously dismantled a number of parts from the press for moving. The press was jacked up, placed on heavy planks and started moving on pipe rollers, from over its cement pit. A host of figures, past, present, and future, pulled the press along. Soon it was out in the alley and on its way to Court-st.

Mr. Hedges' colored employees worked with the precision of a circus crew, gauging every move by inches and feeding rollers under the huge piece of machinery as fast as it moved along. Hundreds of persons lined the streets when the press came rolling onto N. Court-st. Traffic was held up and for the first time in his life, "Boss" Karl Herrmann became a policeman and started routing autos off Court at Watt-st. Officer Fitzpatrick had the same job at Main and Court-sts.

Required Four Hours

The actual moving time over streets and alleys consumed about four hours but considerably more time was needed to raise the press on the plank base and ease it on to the new foundation in the new building.

Six electricians, four plumbers, two mechanics, and three other employees who did everything, were needed in the moving operation besides the nine members of the moving crew from Columbus and The Herald's 17 regular employees.

Sunday, Herald employees were on the job arranging the office set-up and finishing those tasks which were not completed on Saturday under the direction of D. C. Burkholder, the foreman.

ness, his churches and citizens. Lie a little bit if necessary, it will do the old town good. If you don't believe Circleville is the greatest of all towns you had better move to another. Break down the evils that tend to corrupt the morals of any of your citizens."

Spoke Here Before

Mr. Upshaw's lecture was his second given in Circleville. Fifteen years ago he spoke here in a chautauqua program. A large crowd attended the services and many remembered Mr. Upshaw's previous address here.

Following his address Mr. Upshaw left for Lancaster where he is scheduled to give a series of lectures today.

The speaker was introduced by Rev. Ellis Radebaugh, pastor of the local church. Rev. Emil S. Toensmeier, pastor of the Presbyterian church, assisted in the services preceding the lecture.

The expression, "The Wreck of the Hesperus," is derived from the title of a poem by Henry W. Longfellow.

COUNTY BUCKEYE CROP REPORTED SMALL BY REID

The buckeyes are falling—in the pockets of every school boy mother can find several of the big brown seeds for which Ohio is so well-known.

Finding them in town is fast becoming a problem for youth. Many of the old trees that stood in the downtown section have been removed. A few are still to be found in the city. Citizens have best results obtaining buckeyes by visiting the trees during school hours. Before and after school the harvest is reaped by children.

W. M. Reid, an authority on trees in this vicinity, reports the Buckeye trees are fast disappearing from the high sections of the county and are increasing in the lowlands. High waters deposit the buckeyes along the fertile river lowlands. Mr. Reid reported this year's crop of buckeyes is very small.

Mr. Reid explained an easy way to distinguish the buckeye tree. The tree has five leaflets, rough, warty seed coverings and the eye is ordinarily about the size of a dime. The horse chestnut, a close relative to the buckeye, has seven leaflets, the seed coverings are smooth and the eyes of the seed are much larger.

C. H. ORR DIES

COLUMBUS—Charles H. Orr, proprietor of the Beck & Orr Book Binders Co., died in a local hospital Sunday from a heart attack. He had been ill several years. Orr was known as a make-up expert in amateur theatricals. He was a member of Rotary, Faculty Club and Masonic lodge.

LABORER HURT

MARION—Slugged by a robber while he slept, Edward Boylan, 50, a laborer, was reported near death today. He fought the intruder for 15 minutes before being subdued, he told police. The robber took $45, Boylan said.

AID FOR NEEDY PUPILS PLEDGED

COLUMBUS, Sept. 30—Needy high school pupils in Pickaway-co will be aided during the coming school year with money for books, lunches, clothing and car fares. S. Burn Weston, Ohio National Youth Administrator announced today.

The federal relief administration has allotted $73,272 as a maximum monthly grant to be used to help out 12,212 students in the state. No pupil will receive more than $6.00 monthly.

The number of students to be aided in Pickaway-co will be 45 according to the quotas announced today, and the monthly expenditures for this purpose will amount to $270.

To be eligible for aid under this program, a high school pupil must be a member of a family on relief and between the ages of 16 and 25. School superintendents will subdivide the county quotas among the individual schools in the county.

job. He quickly organized his eight workers. Pressman George Douds and a couple of helpers had previously dismantled a number of parts from the press for moving.

The press was jammed up, placed on heavy planks and started moving on pipe rollers from over its cement pit. A hoisting winch, mounted on a truck, pulled the press along. Soon it was out in the alley and on its way to Court-st.

Mr. Hedges' colored employees worked with the precision of a circus crew, gauging every move by inches and feeding rollers under the huge piece of machinery as fast as it moved along. Hundreds of persons lined the streets when the press came rolling onto N. Court-st. Traffic was held up and for the first time in his life, "Boss" Karl Herrmann became a policeman and started routing autos off Court at Watt-st. Officer Fitzpatrick had the same job at Main and Court-sts.

Required Four Hours
The actual moving time over streets and alleys consumed about four hours but considerably more time was needed to raise the press on the plank base and ease it on to the new foundation in the new building.

Six electricians, four plumbers, two mechanics, and three other employees who did everything, were needed in the moving operation besides the nine members of the moving crew from Columbus and The Herald's 17 regular employees. Sunday, Herald employees were on the job arranging the office set-up and finishing those tasks which were not completed on Saturday under the direction of D. C. Burkholder, the foreman.

ness, its churches and citizens. Lie a little bit if necessary, it will do the old town good. If you don't believe Circleville is the greatest of all towns you had better move to another. Break down the evils that tend to corrupt the morals of any of your citizens."

Spoke Here Before
Mr. Upshaw's lecture was his second given in Circleville. Fifteen years ago he spoke here in a chautauqua program. A large crowd attended the services and many remembered Mr. Upshaw's previous address here.

Following his address Mr. Upshaw left for Lancaster where he is scheduled to give a series of lectures today.

The speaker was introduced by Rev. Ellis Radebaugh, pastor of the local church. Rev. Emil S. Toensmeier, pastor of the Presbyterian church, assisted in the services preceding the lecture.

The expression, "The Wreck of the Hesperus", is derived from the title of a poem by Henry W. Longfellow.

THRIFT PLEDGE

conditions have improved materially. There is fresh paint on the barns, and the roads that have paralleled his train have been filled with shiny, new automobiles that were not visible when last he crossed the continent. However, unpopular the AAA may be in the east, which is paying the processing taxes, and whatever the AAA may or may not have had to do with improving conditions, there is no question of the AAA's popularity in the nation's bread basket. It has put millions of dollars into western pockets—and they like the gringle.

And he's pledged his administration to its continuance. He did that on Saturday in Nebraska, in a broadcast throughout the farming states.

Pledges Reduction
Today, he promised that these benefits would be accompanied by steadily reduced federal expenditures for relief and that there would be no need for additional taxes beyond the schedules now in effect. But he coupled this latter promise with a reservation to the effect that if the Supreme court knocks out the AAA, which would also knock out the processing taxes, then some additional taxation may be necessary to carry out existing contracts.

In his summation of the budget figures, past, present, and future made public on his train, as it rolled through Utah, Mr. Roosevelt forecast steadily increasing revenue and steadily decreasing expenditure.

"The 1937 budget," he said, "is now being prepared with a view to sharply decreasing the spread between income and outgo. Thus it is clear to me that the federal government under provisions of present tax schedules will not need new taxes nor increased rates in existing taxes to meet the expense of its necessary annual operations and to retire its public debt."

But, he warned, the estimate of receipts "contemplate continued collection of the processing taxes."

"If the attack which has been made on this act (the AAA) is sustained we will have to face the problem of financing existing contracts for benefit payments out of some form of new taxes."

Mr. Roosevelt said the present underlying tax structure of the country "is now stronger than ever before in our history" and that "the prevailing rate of recovery points to a speedy decline of federal expenditures for emergency purposes."

day after flying over Bimini there was no loss of life but that approximately 60 per cent of the homes were destroyed by the hurricane which struck the island Saturday night.

Communication Halted
"Food supplies on the island sufficient until the mail boat arrives Tuesday, but all drinking water salty," the message said.

Communication with the outside world has been impossible since Saturday night, the pilot added, when the wind reached an estimated 125 miles an hour.

NEW YORK, Sept. 30 — The Morgan liner Dixie, which grounded on a Florida reef on Sept. 2, docked here today with her skipper and a skeleton crew of 55 who remained aboard throughout many trying days.

As soon as the ship, towed here by a tug, was made fast, Captain Elmer William Sundstrom was greeted by his wife and two daughters, Lillian and Florence.

"The happiest day of my life," said Mrs. Sundstrom. Her husband said he was happy, too, but he was not happy over a suggestion he might receive a bonus.

"I don't want that," he frowned. "I just did my duty."

Quick To Crochet—These Doilies Have Many Uses

PATTERN 5447

Even though you don't like crochets, you've probably often admired the beauty of their cobwebs. Here are some crocheted doilies that are just as lovely in their cobwebby lacyness as these. They're made of string—you can use a finer cotton if you want smaller doilies—and they're a bit of handwork you'll be proud of. And, if you're smart, you'll make one for that bazaar that's coming soon. They are done so fast, of course, cost next to nothing to make. And will you be amazed to see the way they'll sell!

Imagine your guests at a luncheon table set with these doilies. Won't anything you serve be enhanced by the beauty of this setting? You can also use them as a buffet set, as doilies, on the serving tray or occasional table.

In pattern 5447 you will find complete instructions for making the doilies shown; an illustration of them and of the stitches needed; material requirements.

To obtain this pattern send 10 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred) to The Herald Household Arts Dept., N. Court-st., Circleville, Ohio.

AND THIS BIG RIVER ALMOST AT OUR DOORSTEP!

WE'LL GET DAD TO BUILD US A BOAT FIRST THING!

INDEED, NOT! THE FIRST THING WITH THIS HOUSE IS TO GET IT IN SHAPE TO LIVE IN! WE'VE GOT TO FORGET PLAY FOR A WHILE!

THAT'S RIGHT TOO! BUT, GEE! THAT'LL BE MORE FUN THAN PLAY, ANYWAY!

INQUIRY DEMANDED IN HOEY MYSTERY

WEST CHESTER, Pa., Sept. 30 A sweeping grand jury investigation of every detail of the fatal shooting of Evelyn Hoey, musical comedy star, was demanded in Chester-co court today by District Attorney William E. Parke.

Members of the coroner's jury, which returned an "open verdict" in the shooting—finding Miss Hoey had met death at "the hands of a person or persons unknown"—will probably be called as witnesses before the grand jury hearing if his request is granted, Parke said. He added that Deputy Coroner Harvey C. Cox and, possibly, some newspapermen, might also be summoned.

REPORTERS ANGER STARS OF SCREEN

Joan Crawford, Franchot Tone in New York, but Deny Plans to Marry.

NEW YORK, Sept. 30—Joan Crawford arrived in New York today to get married (everybody said) to Franchot Tone, but Tone had shuffled off to Buffalo when Miss Crawford's train clanged in to Grand Central terminal.

The marriage? Tone, as he left the train at Harmon, N. Y.—"There might have been one if everybody let us alone."

Miss Crawford, in her compartment aboard the Twentieth Century—"No! Marriage? No!"

Joan's nose was plastered wistfully at the window of the supposed pre-honeymoon special at Harmon, twenty miles from here, when Tone stepped from the train into the arms of a reporter.

Joan Crawford

"Mr. Tone!" said the reporter.

"Your marriage—?"

"I don't," said Tone, "know what you're talking about."

But, he added:

"It might have happened if they'd let us alone."

A car drove up and Tone drove away.

His Auf Wiedersehn was:

"I'm going to Buffalo overnight to see my parents and I'll be back tomorrow, but—no marriage."

Back onto the train and into Miss Crawford's compartment hugged the reporter. Tactfully, he began:

"When are you and Mr. Tone going to get—?"

Miss Crawford registered pained annoyance. She put her hands to her head. She rocked to and fro. She screamed:

"No! No! No!"

She caught her breath—then let go.

"Listen, I'm not temperamental. I'm a right guy. But this talk of marriage—marriage—marriage is driving me nuts."

How about the adjoining suites at the Waldorf towers.

"We're both here for business and pleasure," she said, "but not the bridal suite."

TWO TREATED FOR INJURIES

William Harper, Ninth-ave, and Bessie Barbour, E. Main-st, Columbus, were treated in Berger hospital early Saturday for cuts and bruises suffered in an auto-truck collision on Route 23, two miles north of Circleville. Dr. H. D. Jackson treated them and both were discharged.

The car in which they were riding, a Hudson sedan, was practically demolished when it sideswiped a Benedict Transfer Co. truck, driven by Charles Lowe, Columbus. The Hudson was taken to the each Motor Co.

The hands on a man's hat is said to have its origin in medieval times, when a knight tied the scarf of his lady around his helmet.
